15. Adjourn

Pursuant to ORS 192.640, this notice includes a list of the principal subjects anticipated to be considered or discussed at the above-referenced meeting. This notice does not limit the ability of the board to consider or discuss additional subjects. This meeting is subject to cancellation without notice. The meeting is open to the public and interested citizens are invited to attend. Oregon's Public Records Law (ORS 192) generally makes government records public, but exempts certain personnel information, especially highly personal data like home addresses, Social Security Numbers, and health records, to protect individual privacy (ORS 192.445). While names, work addresses, and basic employment details are often public, records like specific disciplinary actions (if not already public record), medical information, or SSNs are typically withheld unless an exception applies or the employee consents. Public bodies must respond to requests but can redact exempt data, with fees sometimes applying for extensive work.
